AMERICAN WEDDING
by Essex Hemphill

In america,
I place my ring
on your cock
where it belongs.
No horsemen
bearing terror,
no soldiers of doom
will swoop in
and sweep us apart.
They’re too busy
looting the land
to watch us.
They don’t know
we need each other
critically.
They expect us to call in sick,
watch television all night,
die by our own hands.
They don’t know
we are becoming powerful.
Every time we kiss
we confirm the new world coming.

What the rose whispers
before blooming
I vow to you.
I give you my heart,
a safe house.
I give you promises other than
milk, honey, liberty.
I assume you will always
be a free man with a dream.
In america,
place your ring
on my cock
where it belongs.
Long may we live
to free this dream.

It is the Artist’s desire to permeate existence
He does so by the power of his own presence
And by will alone he breathes a work into art.
As pumping air into a balloon, that when let go,
permeates the sky.

He sees perfection in a leaf or another man’s psyche. He is a city of veins and lead;
building and rebuilding the same chapel,
the same marble stairway.

As one walks these stairs and looks around one notes a gallery of light wars. That is all.
A ship dissolving into an atmosphere, into sea.
And when night falls — the light as well.
And all disappears into walls. No more luminous than a moon. Composed of love and will alone.

And the artist does indeed love.
In love with his own process.
It reaffirms his mastery, his mystery.
A testament of his own life force and also
his gift to humanity.

Certain gifts are chosen and arranged in retrospect.
The Artist machetes a clearance. Here one can be spared the pain and the extravagance of the entire body and
be transported by snaking through a glittering fraction.

His gifts, his children, traveled beyond the eye
and hand that spun them into existence.
A lifetime of work letting go
of one who has weathered innocence.
Pressed laurels upon intelligence
All with the generosity
of a transforming smile.

—Patti Smith, June 1988, from The Perfect Moment
ARTISTS

Robert Mapplethorpe was born in 1946 in Floral Park, Queens. In 1963, Mapplethorpe enrolled at Pratt Institute in nearby Brooklyn, where he studied drawing, painting, and sculpture. He also experimented with mixed-media collages, using images cut from books and magazines. He was gifted a Polaroid camera in 1970 and began producing his own photographs to incorporate into the collages. In 1975, he acquired a Hasselblad camera and began photographing his circle of friends and acquaintances — artists, musicians, celebrities, and the S & M underground.

Throughout the 1980s, Mapplethorpe produced images that simultaneously challenged and adhered to classical aesthetic standards: stylized compositions of male and female nudes, delicate flower still lifes, and studio portraits of artists and celebrities. He introduced and refined different techniques and formats, including photogravures, platinum prints on paper and linen, Cibachrome, and dye transfer color prints.

In 1986, he was diagnosed with AIDS. Despite his illness, he accelerated his creative efforts, broadened the scope of his photographic inquiry, and accepted increasingly challenging commissions. The Whitney Museum of American Art mounted his first major American museum retrospective in 1988, one year before his death in 1989.

His vast, provocative, and powerful body of work has established him as one of the most important artists of the 20th century. Today Mapplethorpe is represented by galleries in the Americas and Europe, and his work can be found in the collections of major museums around the world. Beyond the art historical and social significance of his work, his legacy lives on through the work of the Robert Mapplethorpe Foundation. He established the Foundation in 1988 to promote photography, support museums that exhibit photographic art, and fund medical research in the fight against AIDS and HIV.

In keeping with its founder’s wishes, the Mapplethorpe Foundation has given millions of dollars to fund medical research in the fight against AIDS and HIV by establishing research and care centers at major medical facilities, such as Harvard University and Beth Israel in New York. It has also supported the American Foundation for AIDS Research (amfAR) and the AIDS Community Research Initiative of America (ACRIA), among others.

In the field of photography, the Foundation has funded publications, supported exhibitions and acquisitions, and provided grants — in the form of funding or gifts of original Mapplethorpe works — to art institutions ranging from the world’s major art museums to small university galleries. In 1993, the Foundation provided a major gift to the Solomon R. Guggenheim Foundation to create the Robert Mapplethorpe Gallery and inaugurate the Guggenheim’s photography department and program.

In 2011, the Foundation made a gift to and facilitated an acquisition by the J. Paul Getty Museum and the Los Angeles County Museum of Art (LACMA) of over 2,000 works of art by the artist, and the most extensive archive of his career will reside at the Getty Research Institute.

In addition to its charitable work, the Foundation maintains Mapplethorpe’s artistic legacy by organizing and/or lending to exhibitions around the world, preserving its collection of Mapplethorpe artworks, strictly maintaining the editions he established, and placing his work in important collections.

Patti Smith, in full Patti Lee Smith (born December 30, 1946, Chicago, Illinois), is an American poet, rock songwriter, and singer. Growing up in New Jersey, Ms. Smith won an art scholarship to Glassboro State Teachers College. In 1967, she moved to New York City, where she became active in the downtown Manhattan arts scene, writing poetry and living with the photographer Robert Mapplethorpe. Her performance-driven poetry readings soon took on a musical component, and from 1971 she worked regularly with the guitarist and critic Lenny Kaye. By 1973, they had formed a band and began performing widely in the downtown club scene. Ms. Smith’s mesmeric charisma, chant-like but hoarsely compelling musical declamation, visionary texts, and simple but ingenious rock music won her an intense cult following.

Signed to a contract with Arista Records, she released her first album, Horses, in 1975; it was produced by John Cale, the Welsh avant-gardist and cofounder (with Lou Reed) of the Velvet Underground. After Radio Ethiopia (1976), she released her most commercially successful album, Easter, in 1978. It included a hit single, “Because the Night,” written with Bruce Springsteen. Following the album Wave in 1979, she disbanded her group and moved to Detroit, Michigan, where she raised a family with Fred (“Sonic”) Smith, founder of the band MC5.

In 2010, Ms. Smith published the memoir Just Kids, which focused on her relationship with Mapplethorpe. The critically acclaimed work won the National Book Award for nonfiction. Another memoir — M Train, which chronicles her travels and other experiences — was published in 2015. Two years later, she released Devotion, an installment in Yale University Press’s Why I Write series. In 2016, she accepted Bob Dylan’s Nobel Prize for Literature on his behalf. A pioneer in the fusion of the bohemian sensibility with rock, she was able to translate the incantatory power of Beat writers such as Allen Ginsberg and William S. Burroughs into the rock mainstream. In 2007, Ms. Smith was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. France’s Ministry of Culture named her Commander of the Order of Arts and Letters in 2005, and she was awarded the Polar Music Prize for her contributions to music and art by the Royal Swedish Academy of Music in 2011.

Essex Hemphill (1957–1995) was a poet, activist, journalist, and performer whose first collections of poems were the self-published chapbooks Earth Life (1985) and Conditions (1986). His first full-length collection, Ceremonies: Prose and Poetry (1992), won the National Library Association’s Gay, Lesbian, and Bisexual New Author Award. His work is included in the anthologies Gay and Lesbian Poetry in Our Time (1986) and Life Sentences: Writers, Artists, and AIDS (1993). Hemphill studied English at the University of Maryland; in 1978, with a fellow student, he helped found and run the Nethula Journal of Contemporary Literature. His later editing credits include the anthology Brother to Brother: New Writing by Black Gay Men (1991), which won the Lambda Literary Award. In 1983, Hemphill participated in the performance poetry group Cinque with Wayson Jones and Larry Duckette; their work was later featured in the documentaries Tongues Untied (1989) and Black Is...Black Ain’t (1994).

Hemphill’s poetry was also included in the film Looking for Langston (1989). Known for his political edge, Hemphill openly addressed race, identity, sexuality, HIV/AIDS, and the family in his work, voicing issues central to the African American gay community. His aversion to the work of Robert Mapplethorpe and criticism of the art world’s embracing of his work were well-known and articulated in his seminal essay “Does Your Mama Know About Me?” “What is insulting and endangering to Black men,” he wrote, “is Mapplethorpe’s conscious determination that the faces, the heads, and by extension, the minds and experiences of some of his Black subjects are not as important as close-up shots of their cocks.” Hemphill received fellowships from the National Endowment for the Arts and grants from the Pew Charitable Trust Fellowship in the Arts and the DC Commission on the Arts and Humanities. He was a visiting scholar at the Getty Center for the History of Art and the Humanities in 1993 in Santa Monica, California. Hemphill died of complications from AIDS in 1995.

Bryce Dessner (composer) is one of the most sought-after composers of his generation, with a rapidly expanding catalogue of works commissioned by leading ensembles across the world. A curator and vital force in the flourishing realm of new creative music, Mr. Dessner is known to many as a guitarist with The National and has been described as “exactly the kind of composer who personifies what might be next for classical music” (LA Times). Steve Reich hailed him as “an important composer with a developed technique and an intense emotional voice,” who continues today as a “major voice of his generation.” Mr. Dessner’s orchestral, chamber, and vocal compositions have been commissioned by the likes of Los Angeles Philharmonic, Ensemble Intercontemporain, Metropolitan Museum of Art (for the New York Philharmonic), Kronos Quartet, BAM Next Wave Festival, Barbican Centre, Edinburgh International Festival, Carnegie Hall, Sydney Festival, Eighth Blackbird, Sō Percussion, New York City Ballet, and many others. He collaborates across art forms with some of the world’s most creative and respected artists, including Philip Glass, Steve Reich, Alejandro Iñárritu, Paul Simon, Sufjan Stevens, Caroline Shaw, Jonny Greenwood, Bon Iver, Justin Peck, Ragnar Kjartansson, Jennifer Koh, Kelley O’Connor, and Nico Muhly.

Mr. Dessner’s work Murder Ballads, featured on Eighth Blackbird’s album Filament — an album he also produced and performs on — won the 2016 Grammy Award for “Best Chamber Music/Small Ensemble Performance.” He also co-wrote the score, along with Ryuichi Sakamoto and Alva Noto — and was Grammy- and Golden Globe-nominated — for Alejandro Iñárritu’s Oscar-winning film The Revenant. Mr. Dessner’s music — called “gorgeous, full-hearted” by NPR and “vibrant” by the New York Times — is marked by a keen sensitivity to instrumental color and texture. Propulsive rhythms often alternate with passages in which time is deftly suspended. His harmonies are expressive and flexible, ranging from the dense block chords of Aheym to the spacious modality of Music for Wood and Strings. Bridging musical languages and communities comes naturally to him, born in 1976 in Cincinnati, Ohio. After early training on the flute, he switched to classical guitar in his teens. While in high school he started a band with his twin brother, Aaron, also a guitarist. “I was playing classical guitar recitals, and people said, ‘You know, you can’t really do both things,’” recalls Mr. Dessner. “My intuition told me they were wrong... Someday that diversity of experience would be more enriching or rewarding than just going down one path.” Mr. Dessner earned his bachelor’s and master’s degrees from Yale University, resides in Paris, and has been increasingly active composing for major European ensembles and soloists.
